Dear Mayor Daley,

I would like Chicago to have shelters for rescued animals. Then Chicago would have no strays and it could be known as "The Friendly City." Each day Chicago would have animal loving scouts search a part of the city for strays and hurt animals.

Chicago also needs to enforce laws on animal cruelty. On TV we should place announcements proclaiming, "If you have an animal at home who has been treated badly or know of an animal that is being hurt, the person hurting the animal is in trouble with the law. They will be charged a fine or sent to jail."

My idea is not simple, but if we all work together the city can be a better place.
