

Dear Mr. Daley,

I am very inspired by Daniel Burnham's Grant Park, but I have some ideas, too. First, I would like Chicago to be a wonderful and healthy place. I would like Chicago to be with many parks and greener public places so people can just go and pick up dandelions and violets and have a good time. I think that being in the sun will be fun for many, many people.

Next, I would also like to have more fun things to do for kids. Sometimes kids are just bored watching TV when their favorite shows aren't on, maybe, you can host activities like the Winter Sportsfest, the Taste of Chicago, etc.

Last, I would like Chicago to be greener. I have mentioned that Chicago could have more parks and greener public places, but maybe you can tell Chicagoans that they should be greener. You can tell them to ride a bike more often. You can tell them to just turn off the water when they brush their teeth. You are the mayor, and you have power.

These are my ideas. I think these ideas will make a difference.

Sincerely,

Decatur Classical School
