Expository Paragraph Organizer: Profile a Person’s Character Trait

An expository writer uses words to explain or describe something. Use this page to organize an expository paragraph. Your paragraph will tell about a person. It can be a real person. It can be a person in a story.

Who is the person you will describe?

What is the most important character trait of that person?

List information you will include in your paragraph to help people understand that trait. List facts about the person that show that trait.

How will you start your paragraph?

My first sentence will tell ___________________________________________

How will you end your paragraph?

My last sentence will tell ___________________________________________

Write your paragraph on another page.

THINK MORE:
Draw a picture of the person.
Show the important character trait by what you put in the picture.