Dear Mayor Daley,

There should be more kindness in the world. For example, people that are shooting in the streets, and robbing stores. This makes people feel insecure. Kindness is something everyone in this world should have. Treating people nicely is a good feeling. It makes people know that you are a good person. When you treat people with respect and kindness you also receive respect and kindness. People who shoot in streets hurt innocent people and sometimes hospitals aren't enough. Robbing is also an example of unkindness people rob stores, houses, and many other places. Robbing hurts people in many places, when people rob stores it might make workers lose their jobs. People who don't hurt other people though they have done them damage and sadness are very kind. My family, relatives, teachers, and friends have always been very kind with me. Many, many years ago there was a very kind woman who helped Chicago be what it is today. She must have had a great heart. Her name was Jane Addams. Jane Addams built a place called the Hull-House, she helped cleanup Chicago, and she helped create playgrounds, all that she did for homeless people. She is an example of greatness. In conclusion, people who are not kind should try to be more kind. If they know how they would make people feel they would probably feel very good.

Sincerely,
