Dear Mayor Daley,

My big idea is to rebuild all of the abandoned buildings. You should turn them into a place where kids can come and play. I think my big idea is important because kids need to get out of their parents way. They need a break. Also, kids get bored and start to bug their parents. They tell them that they have nothing to do. Another reason is kids will stay out of trouble and they won't get hurt or killed.

To make my big idea come true the city needs to fix up all the old buildings around Chicago. When all the buildings are repaired, people can be hired to supervise the kids. All kinds of games and computers should be in all the buildings.

Chicago will be a lot different because kids won't be getting killed and hurt.

I think my big idea will really work. Please give it a try.

Sincerely,
