

Sound of Rain	El Sonida de la Lluvia
It is raining. The night quietly spreads its feathers. The rain murmurs in the garden Like a chick lispings furtively.	Está lloviendo. Silenciosamente la noche esparses sus plumas. La lluvia murmura en el jardín Como un polluelo ceceando furtivamente.
The hazy moon became wan and Warm winds began to breathe As if the spring flowed from the sun. And it is raining this dark night.	La luna nebulosa tornose pálida y brisas cálidas comenzaron a respirar Como si la primavera proviniera del sol. Y está lloviendo en esta obscura noche.
It is raining. The rain arrives like a kind guest. I open the window to receive him. The rain falls, murmuring and unseen.	Está lloviendo. La lluvia arriva como huesped.k Abro la ventana para recibirlo. La lluvia cae, murmurando e inadvertida.
It is raining on the garden, The window and the roof. The rain falls, Bringing secret glad tidings to my heart	Está lloviendo en el jardín, La ventana y el techo. La lluvia cae, Proveyendo gratas noticias secretas a mi corazón.

Poem Reader

CCSSR5 and 6—analyze author’s techniques and purpose.

What does the poem tell you about how the rain sounds?

What analogy does the poet use to make that idea clear?

What does the poem tell you about how the writer feels?

What words make that clear to you?

How does the writer want you to feel when you read the poem?